Need great as dollars shrink

Published 6/10/2009 in Local News
By STEPHANIE FARLEY
sfarley@gctelegram.com

Stephanie Farley/Telegram — Nine-month-old Kade Davis relaxes June 4 at his Garden City home during a session with Russell Child Development Center speech/language pathologist Tara York. Kade was diagnosed at about two months with CHARGE Syndrome, and Russell is providing services to help the infant and his family.

Lying on a Colorado Rockies blanket, 9-month-old Kade Davis takes the hand he's been chewing on and rubs his slobbery fingers along one of his feet, playing with his toes.

"Can I pick him up," Tara York asks. York is a speech/language pathologist with Russell Child Development Center.

It's a Thursday, and York is visiting the Dav ...

AP: Research suggests wind dying down

Published 6/10/2009 in News

WASHINGTON (AP) — The wind, a favorite power source of the green energy movement, seems to be dying down across the United States. And the cause, ironically, may be global warming — the very problem wind power seeks to address.

The idea that winds may be slowing is still a speculative one, and ...

AP: McKinney not a likely candidate

Published 6/10/2009 in News : Politics

LAWRENCE (AP) — State Treasurer Dennis McKinney says it's highly unlikely he'll run for governor next year.

Many Democrats saw McKinney, former House minority leader, as a likely gubernatorial candidate. But on Monday, he ended that speculation.

"I'm about 90 to 95 percent sure right ...
